QUESTIONS PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

1. Where a Plaintiff a) filed a lawsuit in an Oklahoma state court eventually alleging only state law causes of action; b) that case was ordered to arbitration by a state court judge; c) the arbitrators rendered their award citing Oklahoma state laws as the basis for their award; and d) the award was confirmed by a state court judge, will the entirety of Oklahoma state law be pre-empted by the Federal Arbitration Act and an award permitted to be entered contrary to state law simply because the case in some way involves interstate commerce?

2. By failing to permit any meaningful review of the arbitrators' decision on punitive damages or attorney's fees, was Ameritas Investment Corp. denied due process as guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution?

CONCISE STATEMENT OF THE CASE SETTING OUT FACTS MATERIAL TO CONSIDERATION OF THE QUESTIONS PRESENTED

A. SUMMARY OF FACTS

On March 22, 1991, Mr. Steven M. Slinkard ("Mr. Slinkard") filed a lawsuit in the District Court of Oklahoma County, State of Oklahoma. This lawsuit alleged that certain securities were sold to Mr. Slinkard by Mr. Steven McQueen ("Mr. McQueen"), allegedly an agent of Ameritas Investment Corp. ("AIC"), and also alleged various Oklahoma state statutory and state common law violations by Mr. McQueen and AIC. Because Mr. Slinkard had entered into an Option Agreement with AIC, AIC asked the District Court of Oklahoma County to stay that lawsuit and to compel arbitration. On February 27, 1992, the Motion was granted and the case proceeded to arbitration.

On September 20, 1993, Mr. Slinkard filed his First Amended Claim in the arbitration proceeding alleging violations of Sections 301 and 408 (a)(1) of the Oklahoma Securities Act (Count I); Section 408 (a)(2) of the Oklahoma Securities Act (Count II); Breach of Fiduciary Duty (Count III); Common Law Fraud (Count IV); and Gross Negligence (Count V). The arbitration was held from September 20, 1993, to September 23, 1993.

On December 9, 1993, the panel made an Award to Mr. Slinkard of $238,571.59 which consisted of the following: a) actual damages ($40,500.00); b) punitive damages ($100,000.00) pursuant to Okla. Stat. tit. 23, §9; c) attorney's fees ($71,452.13) pursuant to Okla. Stat. tit. 71, §408; d) costs ($4,142.76); and e) pre-judgment interest ($22,476.70) plus interest on the amount of actual damages awarded ($40,500.00) at 10 percent from September 23, 1993, until the actual damages were paid in full.

Although citing to Okla. Stat. tit. 23, §9, the arbitration panel failed to comply with that statute which mandates that, in order to support any award of punitive damages in excess of actual damages (here $40,500.00), there must be a finding by a court, on the record:

> that there is clear and convincing evidence that the defendant is guilty of conduct evincing a wanton or reckless disregard for the rights of another, oppression, fraud or malice . . .

Likewise, the arbitration panel, in awarding attorneys fees of $71,452.13 (even though the actual damages were only $40,500.00), simply ignored Okla. Stat. tit. 15, §810 which prohibits the awarding of attorneys fees as part of an arbitration award.

Nonetheless, on March 29, 1994, Judge John M. Amick of the District Court of Oklahoma County, Oklahoma affirmed the arbitration panel's award and entered a Judgment in favor of Mr. Slinkard.

The matter was timely appealed to the Oklahoma Supreme Court on April 8, 1994. On April 11, 1995, the Oklahoma Supreme Court assigned the appeal to the Oklahoma Court of Appeals. By a 2-1 published decision on October 31, 1995, the Oklahoma Court of Appeals essentially affirmed the District Court Opinion.

On November 17, 1995, Ameritas Investment Corp. filed a Petition for Certiorari with the Oklahoma Supreme Court.

On March 25, 1996, the Writ was denied; however, the Oklahoma Supreme court also removed the Oklahoma Court of Appeals decision from publication.

B. HISTORY OF WHEN FEDERAL QUESTIONS SOUGHT TO BE REVIEWED WERE RAISED

A summary of the two questions sought to be reviewed are:

1. The scope of the pre-emptive effect of the Federal Arbitration Act.

2. The effect of the case of Oberg v. Honda Motor Company, 114 S. Ct. 2331 (1994), on an arbitration proceeding.

As to the first question, the original award by the arbitrators dated December 9, 1993, contained no references to the Federal Arbitration Act ("FAA"). The panel awarded damages solely based on Oklahoma state law but failed to make the "wanton or reckless disregard for the rights of another, oppression, fraud or malice" finding required by Okla. Stat. tit. 23, §9 and awarded attorneys fees although such an award is prohibited by Okla. Stat. tit. 15, §810.

In any event, the first time that the issue of FAA pre-emption was raised was in Mr. Slinkard's Motion to Affirm the Arbitration Award filed on February 15, 1994. AIC, at its first possible opportunity, raised the issue on the first page of its Reply to Mr. Slinkard's Motion to Affirm filed with the District Court of Oklahoma County on March 3, 1994: "The present action is not pre-empted by the Federal Arbitration Act ("FAA"), but is governed by Oklahoma law..." On March 29, 1994, the District Court of Oklahoma County, Oklahoma granted Mr. Slinkard's Motion to Affirm finding in its Order specifically that pursuant "to the Federal Arbitration Act, the arbitrators did not exceed their authority." This was the first time the trial court had made any reference to the Federal Arbitration Act.

The matter was timely appealed to the Oklahoma Supreme Court on April 8, 1994. The assignments of error by AIC were as follows:

1. The arbitration proceeding was governed by the Oklahoma Uniform Arbitration Act, Okla. Stat. tit. 15, §801, et. seq., not the Federal Arbitration Act ("FAA"), 9 U.S.C. §1, et. seq.
2. Punitive damages were awarded by the arbitrators in excess of their powers.
3. Attorneys' fees and prejudgment interest were awarded by the arbitrators in excess of their powers.

On October 31, 1995, the Order of the District Court was affirmed in part and reversed in part (on the issue of appellate attorneys fees) by the Court of Appeals of the State of Oklahoma. That Opinion (although later withdrawn from publication by the Oklahoma Supreme Court), found, as a matter of law, that Okla. Stat. tit. 15, §810 (pertaining to attorneys fees in arbitration) and Okla. Stat. tit. 23, §9 (pertaining to procedure for awarding punitive damages in the state of Oklahoma) were pre-empted by the Federal Arbitration Act. In its Petition for Certiorari to the Oklahoma Supreme Court AIC again raised the FAA pre-emption issue:

> The Court of Appeals failed to follow applicable precedent, including decisions of the United States Supreme Court, and erred in holding that the FAA pre-empts all state laws on arbitration in all cases involving interstate commerce.

As to the due process issue explained in the Oberg case, that United States Supreme Court case was not decided by this Court until June 24, 1994, which was after this case had been appealed from the District Court of Oklahoma County, Oklahoma to the Oklahoma Supreme Court. That case, therefore, was not cited by Ameritas Investment Corp. until its Reply Brief to the Oklahoma Supreme Court which was filed on December 16, 1994. The due process argument is contained in that Reply Brief as follows:

> Moreover, the United States Supreme court in the recent case of Honda Motor Co., Ltd., ___ U.S. ___, 114 S. Ct. 2331 (1994), has held that any statutory system which does not adequately safeguard against arbitrary awards of punitive damages is violative of the Fourteenth Amendment's Due Process Clause. AIC believes it is clear that such "adequate safeguards" are not present in this case.

However, from the time of AIC's filing on January 7, 1994, of its Motion to Vacate Arbitration Award, AIC has continuously made the argument that, even if the arbitrators were empowered to award punitive damages, it would be improper for them to do so without complying with Okla. Stat. tit. 23, §9. In its Petition for Certiorari, AIC set forth as Question Presented Number (2):

> The Court of Appeals failed to address AIC's constitutional argument. AIC believes that by failing to permit any meaningful review of the arbitrator's decision on punitive damages or attorneys fees, AIC was denied due process, which Constitutional right cannot be waived.

In any event, the issue was squarely before the Oklahoma Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals of the State of Oklahoma prior to the Court of Appeals decision dated October 31, 1995, and certainly prior to the Oklahoma Supreme Court's denial of certiorari on March 25, 1996.

DIRECT AND CONCISE ARGUMENT AMPLIFYING THE REASONS RELIED ON FOR ALLOWANCE OF THE WRIT

A. SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

The present action is not pre-empted by the FAA, but is governed by Oklahoma law, specifically by the Oklahoma Uniform Arbitration Act, Okla. Stat. tit. 15, §801, et. seq. and the Oklahoma statute on punitive damages Okla. Stat. tit. 23, §9.

The Federal Arbitration Act was enacted in 1925 to ensure that courts enforced agreements to arbitrate. Allied-Bruce Terminix Co., 115 S. Ct. 834, 838 (1995). This Court has held that the "FAA contains no express pre-emptive provision, nor does it reflect a congressional intent to occupy the entire field of arbitration." Volt Information Services, Inc. v. Board of Trustees of Leland Standford Junior University, 489 U.S. 468, 477 (1989). Indeed, Congress expressly limited the pre-emptive reach of the FAA by allowing states to invalidate arbitration provisions "on such grounds as exist at law or equity for the revocation of any contract." 9 U.S.C. §2.

This Court has held that only state laws which "require a judicial forum for the resolution of claims which the contracting parties agreed to resolve by arbitration" are pre-empted. Southland Corp. v. Keating, 465 U.S. 1, 10 (state law that made agreements to arbitrate certain franchise claims unenforceable held pre-empted because it "directly conflicts" with section 2 of the Act); Perry v. Thomas, 482 U.S. 483, 491 (1987) (similar state law barring enforcement of agreement to arbitrate wage-collection claims held pre-empted because it was in "unmistakable conflict" with federal policy).

Therefore, since Mr. Slinkard chose to litigate solely state law issues in a state forum and is complaining only of state statutory and state common law causes of action, and because the arbitrators themselves supported their award by reference to Oklahoma state statutes, state law applies to the issue of the remedies available to Mr. Slinkard. If Oklahoma state statutory law had been applied in this case, the arbitration panel would not have been able to award punitive damages, attorneys' fees, or interest in the manner that it did.

Secondly, as can be seen from an examination of Okla. Stat. tit. 15, §812 (listing the sole bases for vacating an arbitration award) or 9 U.S.C. §10 (the FAA version), the permitted grounds for vacating an arbitration award are exceedingly narrow. As such, these statutes simply do not provide the type of procedural due process required to justify an award of punitive damages. Oberg v. Honda Motor Company, 114 S. Ct. 2331 (1994).

B. ARGUMENT

1. Federal Arbitration Act Pre-emption

In this case the "contract" providing for arbitration, an Option Agreement (in paragraph 13), while requiring arbitration, does not give the arbitrators any express authority except to award actual damages. In any event, it is undisputed that the Option Agreement did not authorize the arbitrators to award punitive damages, attorneys' fees, or interest nor did it contain a choice of laws provision. The defendant, aware of Oklahoma state law a) requiring a finding by a Court of "wanton or reckless disregard for the rights of another, oppression, fraud or malice" before an award of punitive damages in excess of actual damages could; and b) prohibiting an award of attorneys fees or interest by arbitrators, sought arbitration.

As this Court recently held:

> Elementary notions of fairness enshrined in our constitutional jurisprudence dictate that a person receive fair notice, not only of the conduct that will subject him to punishment but also of the severity of the penalty that a state may impose.

BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore, 1996 WL 262429, 262437 (U.S.).

Here such "fair notice" was absent in that the arbitrators failed to follow Oklahoma law.

A major underpinning of Mr. Slinkard's argument has been that all Oklahoma laws are pre-empted by the FAA simply because this case involved interstate commerce. AIC suggests that this is not a correct proposition of law. Because state law cannot be used to "defeat arbitration," pre-emption occurs only when a state law affects arbitrability. Arbitrability is not at issue here, however, because neither of the parties have disputed the arbitrability of this matter and because the Oklahoma state statutes, as does the FAA, favor arbitrability. As the First Circuit held in 1988:

> We note first that, even when federal law applies to an arbitration agreement [footnote omitted], the Federal Arbitration Act has never been construed to pre-empt all state law on arbitration. We do not read the recent series of Supreme Court arbitration cases to establish such a proposition by implication. Those cases concerned only laws that would override the parties' choice to arbitrate rather than litigate in court, in direct conflict with the Act's primary purpose of ensuring the enforcement of privately negotiated arbitration agreements. . . . At best, the Supreme Court's decisions support a conclusion that all state laws seeking to limit the use of the arbitral process are superseded by federal law. None of the various pre-emption standards suggests that Congress intended the federal Act to supersede all state arbitration law, and appellee Keystone does not argue to the contrary. See Hyde Park Partners, L.P. v. Connolly, 839 F.2d 837, 849 (1st Cir. 1988) (detailing the "variants" of the pre-emption doctrine, quoting Louisiana Public Service Comm'n v. FCC, 476 U.S. 355, 368-69, 106 S. Ct. 1890, 1898-99, 90 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1986)). See also Societe Generale de Surveillance v. Raytheon, 643 F.2d 863, 867

(1st Cir. 1981) (Federal Arbitration Act pre-empts "only that state law inconsistent with its express provisions").

New England Energy, Inc. v. Keystone Shipping Co., 855 F.2d 1 (1st Cir. 1988).

The "standard of review" in a case where one of the ultimate issues is pre-emption, i.e., whether or not federal law or state law applies, has been enunciated by this Court in Volt Information Sciences, Inc. v. Board of Trustees of Leland Stanford Junior University, 489 U.S. 468 (1989). In that case the parties had in their contract an agreement to arbitrate all disputes between the parties "arising out of or relating to this contract or the breach thereof." The contract also contained a choice-of-law clause providing that "[t]he Contract shall be governed by the law of the place where the Project is located." In the course of that litigation, the issue arose as to whether the FAA pre-empted a specific California state statute:

> In recognition of Congress' principal purpose of ensuring that private arbitration agreements are enforced according to their terms, we have held that the FAA pre-empts state laws which "require a judicial forum for the resolution of claims which the contracting parties agreed to resolve by arbitration." Southland Corp. v. Keating, 465 U.S. 1, 10 (1984). See, e.g., id., at 10-16 (finding pre-empted a state statute which rendered agreements to arbitrate certain franchise > claims unenforceable); Perry v. Thomas, 482 U.S., at 490 (finding pre-empted a state statute which rendered unenforceable private agreements to arbitrate certain wage collection claims). But it does not follow that the FAA prevents the enforcement of agreements to arbitrate under different rules than those set forth in the Act itself (emphasis added).

Several Circuit Courts of Appeal have followed up on the logic of Volt. For example, the Second Circuit in Fahnestock & Co. v. Waltman, 935 F.2d 512 (2nd Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 112 S. Ct. 1241 (1992), held as follows:

> While it is true that in enacting the FAA, "Congress intended to foreclose state legislative attempts to undercut the enforceability of arbitration agreements," Southland Corp. v. Keating, 465 U.S. 1, 16, 104 S.Ct. 852, 861, 79 L.Ed.2d 1 (1984), it also is true that "[t]he FAA contains no express pre-emptive provision, nor does it reflect a congressional intent to occupy the entire field of arbitration," Volt Info. Sciences v. Board of Trustees of the Leland Stanford Jr. Univ., 489 U.S. 468, 477, 109 S.Ct. 1248, 1254, 103 L.Ed.2d 488 (1989). Accordingly, state law may be applied in arbitration matters, subject to pre-emption only "to the extent that it actually conflicts with federal law." Id.; see also Hines v. Davidowitz, 312 U.S. 52, 67, 61 S. Ct. 399, 404, 85 L. Ed. 581 (1941) (pre-emption is found in cases where state law "stands as an obstacle to the accomplishment and execution of the full purposes and objectives of Congress."). We find no conflict between the provisions of the FAA and the Garrity rule.

Ordinarily, "[i]n a diversity action, or in any other lawsuit where state law provides the basis of decision, the propriety of an award of punitive damages for the conduct in question . . . [is a] question[] of state law." Browning-Ferris Indus. v. Kelco Disposal, Inc., 492 U.S. 257, 278, 109 S. Ct. 2909, 2922, 106 L. Ed. 2d 219 (1989). The measure of damages in general is a matter controlled by New York substantive law where federal jurisdiction in New York is predicated on the diversity of the parties. See Shu-Tao Lin v. McDonnell Douglas Corp., 742 F.2d 45, 49 n.5. (2d Cir. 1984); Van Gemert v. Boeing Co., 553 F.2d 812, 813 (2d Cir. 1977). It follows that in this action the Garrity rule prohibiting the award of punitive damages by arbitration must be applied. That the rule is grounded in state policy concerns renders it no less a rule of substantive law. See Stewart, Punitive Damages Arbitration: Fish or Cut Bait, N.Y.L.J., Feb. 21, 1991, at 5, col. 1.

Certainly if state law applies in a diversity federal court action, all the more does it follow that it would control in a purely state court action. Therefore, it seems clear that Oklahoma state law controls here.

The recent case of Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. v. Trimble, 631 N.Y.S.2d 215 (1995), although, of course, not binding on this Court, is virtually identical with this case and very logically holds that, even in a case involving interstate commerce, state law of the state where the arbitration takes place applies and, therefore, that the FAA simply does not pre-empt all state law. In Trimble, most of the facts are the same as in the instant case. Furthermore, the New York Court in Trimble noted this Court's opinion in Mastrobuono v. Shearson Lehman Hutton, Inc., 115 S. Ct. 112 (1995), but ruled that it had no effect on its outcome since the Trimble case simply did not involve contract interpretation concerning a choice of law provision. It was also conceded in Trimble that that case involved interstate commerce, however, the Plaintiff had filed for arbitration in New York. Here, there is an even more compelling case for state law as controlling, as here Mr. Slinkard filed a lawsuit in state court in Oklahoma and did not simply commence arbitration. AIC believes that the logic in Trimble is persuasive. And, in any event, AIC believes that this case and Trimble, among others, highlight the fact that the issue of which law to apply when a lawsuit or arbitration is commenced in a particular state, even if the matter involves interstate commerce, is unsettled.

Mr. Slinkard's counsel has argued that two recent decisions of this court control the outcome of this case. AIC simply does not believe that to be the case.

In Allied-Bruce Terminix Co., 115 S. Ct. 834,838 (1995), the issue was narrow. Prior to that case, it was clear that the issue of arbitrability was to be determined by whether or not a transaction in interstate commerce was contemplated at the time the parties entered into the contract. If so, the Federal Arbitration Act ("FAA") would pre-empt state law to the extent that state law absolutely prevented arbitration. All that the Allied-Bruce Terminix case made clear is that if a transaction or a series of actions between parties in fact turned out to involve interstate commerce (even if not contemplated at the time the contract was entered into), the FAA would dictate that arbitration must take place. The only issue was arbitrability. Allied-Bruce Terminix had no further precendental value as to what rules that arbitration could utilize. In the present case, there is no issue as to arbitrability. In fact, it was AIC who moved to arbitrate the matter. Therefore, AIC believes that the Allied-Bruce Terminix case has no bearing on this appeal.

In Mastrobuono v. Shearson Lehman Hutton, Inc., 115 S. Ct. 1212 (1995), a federal court case, the issue was different; but the effect on this appeal is the same. That case involved an arbitration agreement between the parties which apparently had two conflicting clauses. One of those clauses purported to identify the scope of the arbitrator's powers. The arbitration agreement also contained a conflicts of law provision indicating that New York law would control. The Mastrobuono case arose out of a federal court in Illinois.

Here, of course, the facts are dramatically different. There is no choice of law provision in the contract. More importantly, the case began with a petition by the Plaintiff in a state court in Oklahoma seeking relief based upon state law causes of action. Accordingly, any reliance upon Mastrobuono in this appeal would be misplaced. AIC believes that Mr. Justice Thomas' dissent in Mastrobuono accurately explained the "scope" of that decision:

> Thankfully, the import of the majority's decision is limited and narrow. The case amounts to nothing more than a federal court applying Illinois and New York contract law to an agreement between parties in Illinois. Much like a federal court applying a state rule of decision to a case when sitting in diversity, the majority's interpretation of the contract represents only the understanding of a single federal court regarding the requirements imposed by state law. As such, the majority's opinion has applicability only to this specific contract and to no other. But because the majority reaches an erroneous result on even this narrow question, I respectfully dissent.

Here the ultimate issue is whether or not a state arbitration proceeding brought pursuant to state law is, in fact, governed by Oklahoma state law. Ameritas believes that it is clear that it is. In fact, this Court in Mastrobuono again cited the case of Volt Information Sciences, Inc. v. Board of Trustees of Leland Stanford Junior Univ., 489 U.S. 468 (1989), which held that "it does not follow that the FAA prevents the enforcement of agreements to arbitrate under different rules than those set forth in the Act itself." AIC believes that there is no support for the position that the FAA entirely pre-empts all other state statutes especially in a case commenced in state court and dealing solely with state law claims.

This Court has grappled with the issue of the pre-emptive effect of the FAA for almost 13 years. In the case of Southland Corp. v. Keating, 465 U.S. 1 (1983), this Court initially decided the issue of whether or not the Federal Arbitration Act even applied at all to state court cases. In that case, over a vigorous dissent by Justice O'Connor in which Chief Justice Rehnquist joined, the Court found that, at least on the facts of that case, the FAA to some extent did apply to some cases filed in a state court. Justice O'Connor, however, in her dissent stated that the Court's decision in Southland Corp.:

> . . .is impelled by an understandable desire to encourage the use of arbitration, but it utterly fails to recognize the clear Congressional intent underlying the FAA. Congress intended to require Federal, not State, courts to respect arbitration agreements.

Therefore, in the case of Allied Bruce Terminix Co. v. Dobson, ____ U.S. __, 115 S.Ct. 834, 130 L. Ed. 2d 753 (1995), although Justice O'Connor concurred in the result, she continued to state her opinion that "Congress never intended the Federal Arbitration Act to apply in State courts." Also, in the Allied Bruce Terminix case, Justice Scalia dissented along with Justice Thomas; specifically stating that "Southland clearly misconstrues the Federal Arbitration Act." Justice Scalia went so far as to say that while he would not in the future dissent from judgments that rest on Southland, he "will, however, stand ready to join four Justices in overruling it, since Southland will not become more correct over time."

Since at least four Justices of this Court are on record as questioning the validity of Southland, AIC believes this Court should strongly consider overruling Southland. Even if this Court does not go that far, AIC believes that this Court should re-affirm the basic principle of Volt and clarify the limited extent of pre-emption by the FAA in state court cases, i.e., only as to questions of arbitrability of the entire matter. AIC further believes that the facts of this case are compelling enough for this Court to find that there is simply no support for a FAA pre-emption of all Oklahoma law in a case such as this one where:

a) Plaintiff filed a case in state court alleging only state law causes of action;
b) That case was ordered to arbitration by a state court judge;
c) The arbitrators rendered their award citing state law as a basis for their award;
d) The award was confirmed by a state court judge.

In 1994, the Supreme Court of Montana in Casarotto v. Lombardi, 268 Mont. 369, 886 P.2d 931 (1994), held that a state law requiring notice of an arbitration agreement on the first page of the contract was not pre-empted by the FAA. This Court recently decided the appeal of that case on May 20, 1996 (Doctors' Associates, Inc. v. Casarotto, Case No. 95-559).

The Casarotto case involved a situation where arbitration would be denied if the notice of arbitration was not on the first page of the contract and thus is dissimilar to this case, a Volt-like case involving the rules under which an arbitration will take place. This Court's recent holding in Casarotto, AIC believes, evidences that there is no blanket FAA pre-emption of all state laws. In fact, this Court distinguished Volt and Casarotto in that in Volt the state rule determined only the procedural issues; it did not affect the enforceability of the arbitration agreement itself. Of course, here the enforceability of the arbitration agreement is not at issue.

It appears clear, in any event, that this Court is still trying to come to terms with the extent of the pre-emptive effect of the FAA and considering the dissenting opinions of Chief Justice Rehnquist and Justices O'Connor, Thomas, and Scalia, it is this type of case which gives the Court a clear-cut vehicle for clarifying such an important issue.

The reason the distinction between federal law and state law is so important in this case is that AIC believes that Okla. Stat. tit. 23, §9 simply does not give arbitrators the power to award punitive damages. However, even if it did so, it is clear that the arbitrators deprived AIC of its due process rights by wholly disregarding the specific wording of that statute which by its very terms "shall be strictly construed" (emphasis added). The award of punitive damages in this case ($100,000.00) obviously exceeded the amount of actual damages ($40,500.00) without any "finding" by the "Court" that:

> There is clear and convincing evidence that [AIC] is guilty of conduct evincing a wanton or reckless disregard for the right of another, oppression, fraud or malice, actual or presumed... (emphasis added).

Okla. Stat. tit. 23, §9.

The arbitrators' award of pre- and post-judgment interest and attorneys fees were apparently both predicated upon Okla. Stat. tit. 71, §408, which provides as follows in subsection (a)(2)(4):

> [I]n the case of an offer or sale of a security by such means [described in §408(a)(2)]...the person buying the security may sue at law or in equity to recover the consideration paid for the security together with interest at ten percent (10%) per year from the date of payment, costs, and reasonable attorneys fees ... (emphasis added)

As such, it is clear that interest and attorneys fees can be awarded only in a suit at law or in equity. No reference is made to arbitration proceedings. Thus, the award of interest and attorneys fees by the arbitrators in this matter clearly exceeded their statutory power. Thorneburg Hosiery Co. v. G.L. Wilson Building Company, 381 S.E.2d 718 (N.C. App. 1989) (since attorneys fees were expended in arbitration not litigation, actual attorneys fees in the arbitration were not recoverable).

This is especially true in Oklahoma as Oklahoma's controlling arbitration statute, Okla. Stat. tit. 15, §810 (part of the Uniform Arbitration Act), specifically excludes attorneys' fees from being included in an arbitration award:

> Unless otherwise provided in the agreement to arbitrate, the expenses and fees of the arbitrator, together with other expenses, not including counsel fees incurred in the conduct of the arbitration, shall be paid as provided in the award. (emphasis added)

Therefore, it is clear that, by applying Oklahoma law, the award of punitive damages, interest, and attorneys' fees in this case was improper.

2. Due Process

AIC also believes there are significant constitutional issues implicated by this case as arbitrators in Oklahoma appear to have the unfettered right to award any amount of punitive damages (without having to comply with Okla. Stat. tit. 23, §9) and any amount of attorneys fees (See, Okla. Stat. tit. 15, §812 (or, even if the FAA applies, 9 U.S.C. §1) for the sole, limited grounds to challenge an arbitrator's decision) without any avenue for meaningful review.

This Court in Oberg v. Honda Motor Company, 114 S. Ct. 2331 (1994), has held that any statutory system which does not adequately safeguard against arbitrary awards of punitive damages is violative of the Fourteenth Amendment's

Due Process Clause. In that case, the State of Oregon had, by statute, only provided limited judicial review of the size of punitive damages awards. This Court held as follows:

> Punitive damages pose an acute danger of arbitrary deprivation of property. Jury instructions typically leave the jury with wide discretion in choosing amounts, and the presentation of evidence of a defendant's net worth creates the potential that juries will use their verdicts to express biases against big businesses, particularly those without strong local presences. Judicial review of the amount awarded was one of the few procedural safeguards which the common law provided against that danger. Oregon has removed that safeguard without providing any substitute procedure and without any indication that the danger of arbitrary awards has in any way subsided over time. For these reasons, we hold that Oregon's denial of judicial review of the size of punitive damage awards violates the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. [footnote omitted]

In the concurring opinion of Justice Breyer, Justice O'Connor and Justice Souter in BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore, 1996 WL 2622429 (U.S.), this logic was repeated:

> The reason flows from the Court's emphasis in Haslip upon the Constitutional importance of legal standards that provide "reasonable constraints" within which "discretion is exercised," that assure "meaningful and adequate review by the trial court wherever a jury has fixed the punitive damages" and permit "appellate review [that] makes certain that the punitive damages are reasonable in their amount and rationale in light of their purposes to punish what has occurred and to deter its repetition." [Haslip] at 20-21. See also [Haslip] at 18 ("[U]nlimited jury discretion--or unlimited judicial discretion for that matter--in the fixing of punitive damages may invite extreme results that jar one's constitutional sensibilities").

This constitutional concern, itself harkening back to the Magna Carta arises out of the basic unfairness of depriving citizens of life, liberty, or property, through the application, not of law and legal processes, but of arbitrary coercion. Daniels v. Williams, 474 U.S. 327, 331 (1986); Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U.S. 114, 123, 9 S. Ct. 231, 32 L. Ed. 623 (1889). Requiring the application of law, rather than a decisionmaker's caprice, does more than simply provide citizens notice of what actions may subject them to punishment; it also helps to assure the uniform general treatment of similarly situated persons that is the > essence of law itself. See Railway Express Agency, Inc. v. New York, 336 U.S. 106, 112, 69 S.Ct. 463, 93 L. Ed. 533 (1949) (Jackson, J., concurring).

Even a cursory review of either the Oklahoma or federal statutes setting forth the standards of the review of arbitration awards shows that, beyond any doubt, the requisite level of judicial review was simply not available to AIC to contest the propriety of the punitive damages awarded by the arbitration panel. This is even more egregious here because it is clear from the lower court decisions that, even though Okla. Stat. tit. 23, §9 is the law of Oklahoma in regard to awarding punitive damages, it was not utilized here. Even had it been used, because of the limited standard of review of Okla. Stat. tit. 15, §812 (or 9 U.S.C. §1) AIC would have been deprived of its due process rights.

In Oklahoma, furthermore, because of Art. 23 §8 of the Oklahoma Constitution, those due process rights cannot be waived by agreeing to submit to arbitration:

> Any provision of a contract, express or implied, made by any person, by which any of the benefits of this Constitution is sought to be waived, shall be null and void.

Although not part of the opinion of the Eighth Circuit, the concurring and dissenting comments of Judge Beam in Lee v. Chica, 983 F.2d 883 889 (8th Cir. 1993), nicely capture the fundamental inconsistency between the nature of arbitration and the due process requirements for awards of punitive damages:

> Finally [Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co. v.] Haslip [111 S. Ct. 1032 (1991)] is about due process and protections that must be employed for punitive damages to be permissible in any event. In the arbitration setting we have almost none of the protections that fundamental fairness and due process require for the imposition of this form of punishment. Discovery is abbreviated if available at all. The rules of evidence are employed, if at all, in a very relaxed manner. The factfinders (here the panel) operate with almost none of the controls and safeguards assumed in Haslip. The proceeding at issue in Haslip was conducted in the Alabama State Supreme Court system with full appellate review. Here, as noted by the opinion of the court, the scope of the review of the arbitrator's award is narrowly limited if not almost nonexistent.

AIC believes one additional reason exists why state law should control. The Tenth Amendment to the United States Constitution provides:

> Powers reserved to states or people:
> The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the > States, are reserved to States, respectively, or to the people.

The purpose of the Tenth Amendment was to allay fears that the national government might seek to exercise powers not granted to it and that states might not be able to exercise fully their reserved rights. United States v. Darby, 312 U.S. 100 (1941). Even in commerce among states, the power of a state to promulgate regulations is not taken away until Congress enters and covers a field. Commonwealth v. Perkins, 342 Pa. 529, 21 A.2d 45, aff'd, 314 U.S. 586 (1941). Governments of states are sovereign within their territory save only as they are subject to prohibitions of the United States Constitution or if their actions in some way conflict with the powers delegated to the national government or with congressional legislation enacted in exercise of those powers. Parker v. Brown, 317 U.S. 341 (1943).

Admittedly, the Federal Arbitration Act is an exercise of the federal government's Commerce Clause powers; and, if it so chose, Congress could actually have pre-empted any state law affecting arbitration of disputes arising from interstate commerce. This Court in Volt, however, has explicitly held that Congress did not choose to do so.

CONCLUSION

AIC believes this case is one of critical importance. As evidenced by the increased popularity of non-trial methods of dispute resolution such as arbitration, parties with differences are choosing less-expensive, less time-consuming alternatives which significantly help to unburden the courts. By selecting arbitration, however, a litigant should not thereby be deprived of all due process or protection which the state law affords in litigation. To take such an approach is to discourage parties from seeking alternative means of resolving disputes. If arbitrators have unfettered, essentially unreviewable, powers to award all damages as a matter of right, the use of arbitration will be greatly curtailed, if it is used at all.

WHEREFORE, for these reasons, AIC respectfully requests that this Court grant its Petition for Writ of Certiorari.

CASE SUMMARY

Claimant Steven Slinkard ("Slinkard") alleged the following counts against Respondents Ameritas Investment Corporation ("Ameritas"), Donaldson Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corporation ("DLJ") and Steven McQueen ("McQueen") as agent for Ameritas and DLJ: Count 1: Sale of Unregistered Securities (Investment Contracts) In Violation of Section 301 and 408(a)(1) of the Oklahoma Securities Act; Count II: Sale of Securities (investment Contracts) through Misrepresentations and Omissions in violation of Section 408(a)(2) of the Oklahoma Securities Act; Count III: Sale of Securities by An Unregistered Agent in violation of Section 201(a) and Section 408(a)(1) of the Oklahoma Securities Act; Count IV: Commission of Fraud by an Investment Adviser in Violation of Section 408(c)(2) of the Oklahoma Securities Act; Count V: Violation of Broker-Dealer Rules; Count VI: Breach of Fiduciary Duty; Count VII: Conversion; Count VIII: Common Law Fraud; and Count IX: Negligence.

Slinkard, in his Amended Claim, alleged the following counts against Respondents Ameritas, DLJ, and McQueen: Count I: Sale of unregistered Securities (Investment Contracts) in Violation of Section 301 and 408(a)(1) of the Oklahoma Securities Act; Count II: Sale of Securities through Misrepresentations and Omissions in Violation of Section 408(a)(2) of the Oklahoma Securities Act; Count III: Breach of Fiduciary Duty; Count IV: Common Law Fraud; Count V: Gross Negligence.

Respondents, Ameritas and DLJ, generally denied the counts as set forth in the Statement of Claim. Ameritas and DLJ specifically denied that Slinkard was their customer in connection with any of the transactions set forth in the claim and denied that McQueen acted as an agent or had any contractual relationship with Ameritas and/or DLJ.

RELIEF REQUESTED

Claimant requested actual damages as set forth at 71 Okl. Stat. Section 408(a)(2)(A), which is the return of all money invested with McQueen, equal to the sum of $42,700.00, together with interest at ten percent (10%) per year from the date of payment, together with costs and a reasonable attorneys fee plus exemplary damages in excess of $100,000.00 and such other and further relief that the arbitrator deems fair and equitable.

Respondents Ameritas and DLJ requested that the claim be dismissed and that all claims be denied and that they be awarded costs and attorney's fees.

OTHER ISSUES CONSIDERED & DECIDED

Respondents, Ameritas Investment Corporation and Steven Dale McQueen did not file with the NASD properly executed submissions to arbitration but are required to submit to arbitration pursuant to Section 8 of the NASD Code of Arbitration Procedure and having answered the claim, appeared and testified the hearing, are bound by the determination of the panel on all issued submitted.

Respondent McQueen did not file an Answer to the Statement of Claim. However, the panel determined that McQueen was properly served with the Statement of Claim and also had proper notice of the hearing.

Prior to the hearing, respondent Donaldson Lufkin & Jenrette Securities was dismissed by the Claimant from the claim.

The parties have agreed that the Award in this matter may be executed in counterpart copies or that a handwritten, signed Award may be entered. In either case, the parties have agreed to receive conformed copies of the Award while the originals remain on file with the NASD.

JUDGMENT

The cause is before the Court this 11th day of March, 1994, on Defendants' Motion to Vacate Arbitration Award and on Plaintiff's Motion to Affirm Arbitration Award rendered in favor of the Plaintiff Steven M. Slinkard and against the Defendants Ameritas Investment Corp. and Steven Dale McQueen, on December 9, 1993. Plaintiff appears by and through his counsel of record, Jerry L.

Colclazier and Joseph C. Long. Defendant Ameritas Investment Corp. appears by and through their counsel James M. Chaney, Norman Krivosha, and David M. Williams. Pursuant to the Federal Arbitration Act, the arbitrators did not exceed their authority and therefore Defendants' Motion to Vacate is denied and Plaintiff Slinkard's Motion to Affirm is granted.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED, ADJUDGED, AND DECREED that the Plaintiff, Steven M. Slinkard, have and recover judgment of and from the Defendants Ameritas Investment Corp. and Steven Dale McQueen, jointly and severally, for the sum of $40,500.00 actual damages, $22,476.70 prejudgment interest, $100,000.00 punitive damages, $71,452.13 attorney's fees, and $4,142.76 costs, for the total sum of $238,571.59, for all of which let execution issue.

MEMORANDUM OPINION

GARRETT, Chief Judge:

Appellant, Ameritas Investment Corp., a Nebraska Corporation, a/k/a BLN Investment Corp. (Ameritas), brings this appeal from the trial court's order affirming a December 9, 1993, arbitration award. The trial court's March 11, 1994, Judgment [filed March 29, 1994] in favor of Appellee, Steven M. Slinkard (Slinkard) awarded him actual damages, prejudgment interest, punitive damages, attorney fees and costs from Ameritas and Steven Dale McQueen (McQueen) jointly and severally. McQueen is not a party to this appeal.

The Judgment also provides:

> Pursuant to the Federal Arbitration Act, the arbitrators did not exceed their authority and therefore Defendants' Motion to Vacate is denied and Plaintiff Slinkard's Motion to Affirm is granted.

Ameritas contends the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) does not preempt state law in this case. It claims that because arbitrability is not an issue, and Oklahoma's arbitration law is not inconsistent with the FAA, state law is the appropriate law to apply. It contends the petition raised only state law claims and was filed in an Oklahoma state court. It also contends because of the Option Agreement which the parties executed; because the case was filed in state court; and because the petition raised only state law claims, arbitration was governed by the Code of Arbitration Procedure of the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc. (NASD) and the Oklahoma Uniform Arbitration Act (the Act), 15 O.S. 1991 §801 et seq. It also contends the Option Agreement does not give arbitrators any authority except to award actual damages, and does not authorize an award of punitive damages, interest or attorneys' fees. Paragraph 13 of the Option Agreement provides:

> 13. It is agreed that any controversy between us arising out of your business or this agreement, except for those disputes between us arising under the federal securities laws which are or are held to be non-arbitrable as a matter of law, shall be submitted to arbitration conducted under the provisions of the Constitution and Rules of the Board of Governors of the New York Stock Exchange, Inc. or any other national securities exchange on which a transaction giving rise to the claim took place or pursuant to the Code of Arbitration Procedures of the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc., as the undersigned may elect. Arbitration must be commenced by service upon the other party of a written demand for arbitration or a written notice of intention to arbitrate, therein electing the arbitration tribunal. In the event the undersigned does not make such election within five (5) days of such demand or notice, then the undersigned authorizes you to do so on behalf of the undersigned.

The United States Supreme Court held in Southland Corp. V. Keating, 465 U.S. 1, 14-15, 104 S.Ct. 852, 860, 79 L.Ed.2d 1 (1984), that the FAA preempted state law in cases "involving commerce". The Court stated:

> If it is correct that Congress sought only to create a procedural remedy in the federal courts, there can be no explanation for the express limitation in the Arbitration Act to contracts "involving commerce." 9 U.S.C. §2.... We would expect that if Congress, in enacting the Arbitration Act, was creating what is thought to be a procedural rule applicable only in federal courts, it would not so limit the Act to transactions involving commerce. On the other hand, Congress would need to call on the Commerce Clause if it intended the Act to apply in state courts. Yet at the same time, its reach would be > limited to transactions involving interstate commerce. We therefore view the "involving commerce" requirement in §2, not as an inexplicable limitation on the power of the federal courts, but as a necessary qualification on a statute intended to apply in state and federal courts. (Citation omitted).

9 U.S.C. §2 provides:

> §2 Validity, irrevocability and enforcement of agreements to arbitrate.
> A written provision in any maritime transaction or a contract evidencing a transaction involving commerce to settle by arbitration a controversy thereafter arising out of such contract or transaction, or the refusal to perform the whole or any part thereof, or an agreement in writing to submit to arbitration an existing controversy arising out of such a contract, transaction, or refusal, shall be valid, irrevocable, and enforceable, save upon such grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract. (Emphasis added).

The Option Agreement executed in the instant case is the contract, and the wired transmissions between Oklahoma City and New York are sufficient to satisfy the "involving commerce" requirement of section 2. See Mayaja v. Bodkin, 803 F.2d 157 (5th Cir. 1986), rev'd on other

Citing Allied-Bruce Terminix Companies, Inc. v. Dobson, ___ U.S. ___, 115 S.Ct. 834 (1995), Division 4 of this Court examined the "involving commerce" language of section 2, in Southern Oklahoma Health Care Corp. d/b/a Memorial Hospital of Southern Oklahoma, v. JHBR-Jones-Hester-Bates-Riek, Inc., 900 P.2d 1017 (Okl.App. 1995):

> The Allied-Bruce Terminix court held that in order to extend the FAA's reach to the limits of Congress' Commerce Clause power, the "contract evidencing a transaction" and "involving commerce" language of section 2 should be read broadly. (Emphasis added.) It determined that "involving commerce" as used in section 2 is the "functional equivalent of 'affecting,' " which normally denotes that Congress intended to exercise commerce power to the full, id. at ___, 115 S. Ct. at 841 (citing Russell v. United States, 471 U.S. 858, 859 (1985)), or a full exercise of constitutional power. ___ U.S. at ___, 115 S.Ct. at 841; Bernhardt v. Polygraphic Co. of America, 350 U.S. 395 (1967).

Although the parties could have specified Oklahoma law would apply which would have controlled,[1] they did not do so. Therefore, we agree with the trial court's determination the FAA is applicable to this case, preempting state law.

Next, Ameritas contends the arbitrators were not authorized to award punitive damages. Whether Oklahoma law permits such an award is immaterial, because we have determined Oklahoma law is preempted in the instant case.

Appellees contend a majority of courts agree the federal substantive common law under the FAA allows arbitrators to award punitive damages on two bases:[2] (1) the Supreme Court's preference for arbitration as a legitimate form of dispute resolution, citing Shearson/American Express, Inc. v. McMahon, 482 U.S. 220 (1987); (see also Kelley v. Michaels, 59 F.3d 1050 (10th Cir. 1995)); and (2) under the FAA, the parties, by agreement, may allow the arbitrators to award such damages. Appellees contend both bases of this conclusion are met in this case.

It was stated in Mastrobuono v. Shearson Lehman Hutton, Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 115 S.Ct. 1212, 131 L.Ed.2d 76 (1995), that if contracting parties agree to include claims for punitive damages as an issue to be arbitrated, "the FAA

[2]The Garrity rule, under Garrity v. Lyle Stuart, Inc., 40 N.Y.2d 354, 386 N.Y.S.2d 831, 353 N.E.2d 793 (1976), described as representing a public policy decision that punitive damages should not be awarded except by a court, is offered by Ameritas as authority against punitive damages. Appellees contend this rule is not the preferred authority for the reasons described above.

ensures that their agreement will be enforced according to its terms even if a rule of state law would otherwise exclude such claims from arbitration." Id. at 1216. There was no specific mention of punitive damages in Mastrobuono. similar to the arbitration agreement in the instant case. Contrary to the agreement in the instant case, however, the Mastrobuono agreement contained a choice of law provision, providing the contract would "governed by the laws of the State of New York." Notwithstanding this inclusion, the Supreme Court ruled the FAA would apply and punitive damages could be awarded. The Court stated, at 1217:

> The choice-of-law provision, when viewed in isolation, may reasonably be read as merely a substitute for the conflict-of-laws analysis that otherwise would determine what law to apply to disputes arising out of the contractual relationship. Thus, if a similar contract, without a choice-of-law provision, had been signed in New York and was to be performed in New York, presumably "the laws of the State of New York" would apply, even though the contract did not expressly so state. In such event, there would be nothing in the contract that could possibly constitute evidence of an intent to exclude punitive damages claims. Accordingly, punitive damages would be allowed because, in the absence of contractual intent to the contrary, the FAA would pre-empt the Garrity rule. (Emphasis added).

At most, the choice-of-law clause introduces an ambiguity into an arbitration agreement that would otherwise allow punitive damages awards. As we pointed out in Volt,[3] when a court interprets such provisions in an agreement covered by the FAA, "due regard must be given to the federal policy favoring arbitration, and ambiguities as to the scope of the arbitration clause itself resolved in favor of arbitration." 489 U.S., at 476, 109 S.Ct., at 1254. See also Moses H. Cone Memorial Hospital v. Mercury Constr. Corp., 460 U.S. 1, 24-25, 103 S.Ct. 927, 941-42, 74 L.Ed.2d 765 (1983).

We think the best way to harmonize the choice-of-law provision with the arbitration provision is to read "the laws of the State of New York" to encompass substantive principles that New York courts would apply, but not to include special rules limiting the authority of arbitrators. Thus, the choice-of-law provision covers the rights and duties of the parties, while the arbitration clause covers arbitration; neither sentence intrudes upon the other. In contrast, respondents' reading set up the two clauses in conflict with one another: one foreclosing punitive damages, the other allowing them. This interpretation in untenable.

Even in the case of an arbitration agreement which specifies New York law, which does not provide for punitive damages, the Supreme Court held punitive damages could be awarded when the FAA applies to the case. See also Kelley v. Michaels, supra,[4] wherein the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit held directly in accordance with Mastrobuono. In the instant case, in which no such specification of state law is made, there is an even stronger case to be made in favor of allowing arbitrators to award punitive damages. Thus, we hold the arbitrators were within their authority to make the award.

Next, Ameritas contends the district court had no power to award "additional damages", i.e., punitive damages, attorney fees and interest, after the arbitration was concluded. However, the original (March 11, 1994) judgment of the trial court only affirmed the awards made by the arbitrators. The FAA permitted an award of attorney fees. The trial court, on July 1 1994, entered an order allowing Slinkard $9,631.25 additional attorney's fees and $1,618.72 in costs as "additional fees and costs pursuant to the arbitration of this matter." The authority for the additional fees and costs was said to be 71 O.S. Supp. 1992 §408(a)(2)(A).

Ameritas contends the Option Agreement required that any controversy between the parties be submitted to the arbitrators. Slinkard cites §408, supra. We agree with Ameritas and hold the trial court erred in entering its July 1, 1994 order as to additional attorney's fees and costs.

The March 11, 1994 judgment of the trial court, affirming the arbitration award, should be and is affirmed. The July 1, 1994 order of the trial court awarding additional attorney's fees and costs should be and is vacated and reversed. Slinkard's motions to dismiss this appeal and for appeal related attorney fees are denied.

Okla. Stat. tit. 15, §810

Unless otherwise provided in the agreement to arbitrate, the expenses and fees of the arbitrator, together with other expenses, not including counsel fees incurred in the conduct of the arbitration, shall be paid as provided in the award.

Okla. Stat. tit. 15, §812

A. Upon application of a party, the court shall vacate an award if:

1. The award was procured by corruption, fraud or other illegal means;

2. There was evident partiality by an arbitrator appointed as a neutral or corruption in any of the arbitrators or misconduct prejudicing the rights of any party;

3. The arbitrators exceeded their powers;

4. The arbitrators refused to postpone the hearing upon sufficient cause being shown therefor or refused to hear evidence material to the controversy or otherwise so conducted the hearing, contrary to the requirements of this act, as to prejudice substantially the rights of a party; or

5. There was no arbitration agreement and the issue was not adversely determined in proceedings under Section 3 of this act and the party did not participate in the arbitration hearing without raising the objection.

B. The fact that the relief was such that it could not or would not be granted by a court of law or equity is not ground for vacating or refusing to confirm the award.

C. An application under this section shall be made within ninety (90) days after delivery of a copy of the award to the applicant. If predicated upon corruption, fraud or other illegal means, the application shall be made within ninety (90) days after such grounds are known or should have been known.

D. When vacating the award on grounds other than stated in paragraph 5 of subsection A of this section, the court may order a rehearing before new arbitrators are chosen as provided in the agreement. In the absence of such provision, new arbitrators shall be chosen by the court in accordance with Section 4 of this act. If the award is vacated on grounds set forth in paragraphs 3 and 4 of subsection A of this section, the court may order a rehearing before the arbitrators who made the award or their successors appointed in accordance with Section 4 of this act. The time within which the agreement requires the award to be made is applicable to the rehearing and commences from the date of the order.

E. If the application to vacate is denied and no motion to modify or correct the award is pending, the court shall confirm the award.

Okla Stat. tit. 23, §9

Jury may give exemplary damages, when

A. In any action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, where the defendant has been guilty of conduct evincing a wanton or reckless disregard for the rights of another, oppression, fraud or malice, actual or presumed, the jury, in addition to the actual damages, may give damages for the sake of example, and by way of punishing the defendant, in an amount not exceeding the amount of actual damages awarded. Provided, however, if at the conclusion of the evidence and prior to the submission of the case to the jury, the court shall find, on the record and out of the presence of the jury, that there is clear and convincing evidence that the defendant is guilty of conduct evincing a wanton or reckless disregard for the rights of another, oppression, fraud or malice, actual or presumed, then the jury may give damages for the sake of example, and by way of punishing the defendant, and the percentage limitation on such damages set forth in this section shall not apply.

B. The provisions of this section shall be strictly construed.

Okla Const. art. 2, §7

No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law.

Okla Const. art. 23, §8

Any provision of a contract, express or implied, made by any person, by which any of the benefits of this Constitution is sought to be waived, shall be null and void.

U.S. Const. amend. XIV, §1

All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

9 U.S.C. §2

A written provision in any maritime transaction or a contract evidencing a transaction involving commerce to settle by arbitration a controversy thereafter arising out of such contract or transaction, or the refusal to perform the whole or any part thereof, or an agreement in writing to submit to arbitration an existing controversy arising out of such a contract, transaction, or refusal, shall be valid, irrevocable, and enforceable, save upon such grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract.

9 U.S.C. §10

In either of the following cases the United States court in and for the district wherein the award was made may make an order vacating the award upon the application of any party to the arbitration --

(a) Where the award was procured by corruption, fraud, or undue means.

(b) Where there was evident partiality or corruption in the arbitrators, or either of them.

(c) Where the arbitrators were guilty of misconduct in refusing to postpone the hearing, upon sufficient cause shown, or in refusing to hear evidence pertinent and material to the controversy; or of any other misbehavior by which the rights of any party have been prejudiced.

(d) Where the arbitrators exceeded their powers, or so imperfectly executed them that a mutual, final, and definite award upon the subject matter submitted was not made.

(e) Where an award is vacated and the time within which the agreement required the award to be made has not expired the court may, in its discretion, direct a rehearing by the arbitrators.
